

July 31, 2017

Well beyond his visionary leadership skills and scientific achievements, Dr. May truly understands the humanity of emerging scientists and engineers and instills in them the confidence to break down scholarly barriers and to exceed intellectual expectations. If fortune is kind enough to pass the Presidency of the American Chemical Society to Dr. May, both newly minted and established scientists would have attained a bold champion of facts, the scientific method and human integrity.

Bryant C. Nelson
Research Chemist